The 11th Torunian CARBON SYMPOSIUM

The conference will discuss achievements and new challenges facing carbon materials in various allotropic forms, from 0-dimensional to 3-dimensional structures, as well as other synthetic carbon materials used in aerospace, automotive, construction, energy conversion and storage, electronics or optics. Issues related to modern applications of carbon materials in medicine or environmental protection will be discussed, as well as topics aimed at working towards reducing the negative impact of carbon-related industries on the natural environment.

TOPICS:

- Novel carbon structures and composites,
- Experimental, theoretical and modeling approaches to carbon materials,
- Carbon materials for energy conversion and storage,
- Carbon materials for electronics and optics,
- Carbon materials for medicine and biology,
- Carbon materials for environment protection,
- Carbon-based composites and nanocomposites,
- Synthetic carbon and graphite used in industry,
- New trends in carbon materials technology.
